SINTESI PROGETTO:

So far Prevention of human trafficking (THB) for labour exploitation has been significantly underexposed in research, as opposed to Prosecution of perpetrators and Protection of victims (3 P's). The proposed research seeks to prevent human trafficking by translating the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights (the UNGP) in the field of THB in three sectors (agriculture, construction and tourism/hotel). These guiding principles are built on the following three pillars: i) state duty to protect against human rights abuses ii) corporate responsibility to respect human rights iii) access by victims to effective remedy. The main focus of this 16 months project is on the second pillar, which means a company's responsibility to avoid causing or contributing to THB through its own activities or activities in the supply chain, and to address such impacts when they occur. To that aim the guiding principles will be translated and operationalized in sector specific guides which are tailor made for the seven countries. Although the focus is on the second pillar of framework, it links to the obligations to Prosecute and Protect, and elaborates on the first pillar of the state duty to protect against human rights abuses
