

Venice Biennale: a multidisciplinary field analysis

Description

This is a conjoint project developed by Ca' Foscari University of Venice and Leuphana Universität Lüneburg (Germany) aimed at exploring the artistic, economic and social effect of the Venice Biennale.

Students admitted to the project will be active participants of a field research whose learning objectives are:

- the review of Biennale history and its organizational and institutional dimensions
- the analysis of the relationship between the exposition, the curatorship, artistic practices and the art market and career of the artists
- the analysis of the relationship between Biennale and the city of Venice and its positive and negative spillovers

In particular, the major topics covered by the project include:

- Claims, conditions and challenges of large-scale exhibitions
- Relationship of the theme and claim of the exhibition to the artistic works
- The Venice Effect: Biennale and the art market
- The Biennale Effect: art in Venice and urban transformation
- The reception of the Biennale in different media.
