Life, Progress, Infinity and The Demise of the first Human Race ...and its Economic Model of Survival

a lecture by
Vadim de Grainville (Grigoryan)

In his keynote speech, Vadim de Grainville (Grigoryan) explores the notion of human development and the idea of progress through an unconventional mix of references spanning from philosophy, to economical science and from business practices to art. He tries to engage public into questioning the imperative of growth in the world of limited space, time and resources. It is an invitation to rethink the concepts of wealth and capital, and their relationship to happiness in individual and common senses.
