Lecture title: Ionic Liquids and their Applications in Transformation of Carbon Dioxide

Profile

Professor Zhimin Liu got her Ph D degree from China Petroleum University in 1997. She is currently a group leader at Institute of Chemistry, Chinese Academy of Science (ICCAS). Her research interest is green chemistry with focus on study on green solvents (including ionic liquids and supercritical fluids) and chemical conversion of CO₂ and biomass. To date, she has published over 300 research papers in international journals. In 2011, she was awarded a second class prize of National Natural Science Award of China, and was supported by China National Fund for Distinguished Young Scientists. Currently, she serves as the editor-in-Chief of Current Opinion in Green and Sustainable Chemistry. She is a Fellow of Royal Society of Chemistry.
