Presentation Design

In a time when the efficiency of communication becomes more and more important, and sometimes the form of communication is above its substance, it is necessary to give students the basic elements that allow them to communicate very efficiently using modern technologies.

At the end of this class, the student is able to analyze a theme and use the elements he learned to establish the valuable contents and communicate them swiftly.

The goal of the course is to teach the importance of a type of communication that aims to underline the real purpose of what we want to communicate. It also to improve the student's ability to deal with stressful situations, caused by limited time to perform a task and the high expectations required from society.

Thanks to this course, students develop their presentation skills from both a graphic and public speaking perspective and they work in groups in order to apply the knowledge gained in actual case studies.

Public speaking

This course aims to give students a metaphorical "toolbox" thanks to which they can be autonomous in conceiving, designing and delivering an effective public speaking.
