Post-doc Fellowship at Ca' Foscari University of Venice

“Expression of Interest” for Global at Venice - call 2021

1. Interested institution (legal person):

Ca' Foscari University of Venice

2. Department/Centre:

Department of Humanities (Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici).

The Department of Humanities (DSU) is an innovative center of development in different areas of the humanities, which mainly include antiquity, philological-literary and historical-artistic sciences and historical and anthropological sciences, currently divided into 42 scientific-disciplinary sectors: history, archeology and history of the arts, classical and oriental studies, medieval latin, novels and Byzantine studies, Italian studies, linguistics, anthropology, history of religions and geography, forms of written transmission and text studies. The overlapping of the two areas of excellence of the DSU identifies an integrated research field where the study of memory, in all its forms (from historical-cultural to archaeological-artistic) and its conservation, valorisation and narration allow the Department to cover a large geographical and chronological area, which ranges from Italy to Europe, to the Near East, from antiquity to the contemporary world. The DSU, since its establishment (in 2011), has followed a pioneering path of innovation with a specific commitment to the integration of tools offered by information technology in research, teaching and knowledge sharing practices; this is why today it is considered strategic to direct its excellence towards an integrated project of Digital Humanities (DigHum) and Public Humanities (PubHum).
