Learning objectives

Description

The objective of the course is to bring the student closer to the Italian linguistics, in order to facilitate the study of the linguistic and grammatical characteristics of the language.

Besides the presentations of some specific structures of the Italian language, students will examine the principal strategies for the widening of metalinguistic competence, for the development of their vocabulary, for the comprehension of textual dimension, and to improve pronunciation, according to a linguistic perspective that does not renounce the comparative dimension between Italian, English, and their native languages.

The course includes one presidential and one distance part, through exercises and thematic forums within the Moodle platform, in order to verify the communicative competence of the students throughout the Italian language module.

Topics

- Elements of the Italian phonetics (the phonological repertoire of Italian, techniques for learning how to pronounce, the relationships between spelling and listening);
- Elements of Italian morphology (the concordance in general and in number of nouns and adjectives, the definite and indefinite articles, the verbal system, the formation of adverbs);
- Italian elements of syntax (the position of the syntagmatic indicators, the negative and interrogative sentences);
