Abstract	ODyCCEuS (Opinion Dynamics and Cultural Conflict in European Spaces), funded by the European Horizon 2020 program, aims to study how social and cultural conflicts arise and spread, based on the analysis of language and its use in web and social media. Within the project is the creation of an 'open' digital platform, Penelope, which will enable the integration of tools for data collection and integration, analysis and (geo)visualization. In addition, two participatory tools will be built, the Opinion Observatory and the Opinion Facilitator, through which citizens, associations, and media will be able to visualize and share data and tools to map and monitor the places and terms of growing social crises and conflicts in real time.
